

Prameela Kalive has been a professional in the Indian Industry for over 20 years now, having started her career as a missile scientist with the Defence Research and Development Organization where she was working for over a decade on mission critical defense programs like Agni and Akash. She worked closely with Dr Abdul Kalam in many of these programs

Following her interesting and challenging career in R&D and Technology, she moved to the IT Industry and has played multiple leadership roles in Zensar Technologies for the past several years. She has led several core portfolios in Zensar – operations, sales, global strategy and now global talent management.

She has been the driving force behind a number of turnaround people initiatives at Zensar. She also heads Zensar's Centre for Business Innovation which is focused on building Capacity, Capability and Competency to meet Global talent requirements

Prameela is the President of the Pune Chapter of the National Human Resource Development Network in India and is also a member of CII's (Confederation of Indian Industries) National Committee on HR and Skills.

To add to her versatile profile, she is also an alumna of the London School of Economics.